

ProQuest's Primary Source Collections

Second to None!

98% of faculty believe it is extremely important to assign primary sources to students to develop critical thinking skills

200k

average pageviews per month of Early English Books Online in 2015

95%

of librarians believe that they help students develop research, critical analysis and information literacy skills

93%

of employers say critical thinking, clear communication and the ability to solve complex problems is more important than a student's undergraduate major

60%

of undergraduates have poor skills related to locating and evaluation scholarly information

248M+

pages of world-class collections

325+

years of historical periodicals coverage

50+

newspapers covering over 350 years

=

6 Centuries

of history including the largest collection of historical periodicals

95% of Humanities Upper Division faculty assign primary source materials in their teaching

357

Number of subject areas covered by publications that cite historical periodicals*

40%

of Humanities dissertations and theses reference newspapers

14%

of all dissertations in PQDT Global cite content from historical periodicals*

10

average number of different primary sources used by Humanities faculty in research

*Selected ProQuest Historical Periodicals analyzed

ProQuest's Primary Source Collections

Second to None!

of faculty believe it is extremely important to assign primary sources to students to develop critical thinking skills

of employers say critical thinking, clear communication and the ability to solve complex problems is more important than a student's undergraduate major

248M+

pages of world-class collections

325+

years of historical periodicals coverage

50+

newspapers covering over 350 years

=

6 Centuries

of history including the largest collection of historical periodicals

of Humanities Upper Division faculty assign primary source materials in their teaching

Number of subject areas covered by publications that cite historical periodicals

*Selected ProQuest Historical Periodicals analyzed